PATIENT ACCESS STRATEGY as presented by Jane London and MoH Team

Giving patients online access to their health information can increase patient confidence, empowerment, and can truly place patients at the center of their care. The Ministry of Health is currently developing a strategy for Online Patient Identity and Access. This strategy will create a vision for how patient-centred technologies will be used to increase patient access to health information and services, give physicians and care providers new ways to interact with patients, while ensuring high value, quality and sustainability of the health care system.
