PRIMARY CARE UPDATE FOR THE CENTRAL INTERIOR

from the CIR Collaborative Services Committee (CSC)

The Collaborative Services Committee (CSC) wants to update the communities of 100 Mile House, Williams Lake, and surrounding areas about the challenges we face locally in primary care. It is disheartening to see that many people in our region do not have a family care provider. We want to acknowledge the changes in health services and provide guidance on what people should expect in the upcoming months and how to navigate the system if they don't have a family doctor or nurse practitioner. Now, more than ever, we have to work together as a region to support access to health services and primary care.

Who is the Collaborative Services Committee?

The Collaborative Services Committee (CSC) is a partnership between the Central Interior Rural Division of Family Practice, Interior Health, Doctors of BC, Ministry of Health, and the Family Practice Services Committee. It also includes representatives from the local Nations, municipal government, emergency services, and other healthcare organizations to represent the full scope of shared responsibility for the health of the region. The CSC supports primary care planning, addresses issues in the health system, and promotes community health and wellness.

WHAT IS THE CURRENT SITUATION IN PRIMARY CARE?

Primary care in BC is undergoing system transformation, including the development of Primary Care Networks (PCN). These are community-based networks of health care professionals and clinics working to provide team-based primary care services. The Central Interior Rural Primary Care Network (CIR PCN) is actively being built and developed in partnership with the Division of Family Practice, Interior Health, and First Nations partners.

We Know This is Still Not Enough...

We recognize that this is still not enough, and the significant human resource shortage in healthcare in BC and across Canada means that too many people are without a family care provider. Currently, there are over 870 vacant family doctor positions in BC alone, and we expect more retirements in the future.

Competing with other towns across the province and country for scarce resources in healthcare recruitment makes collaborating as a region more important than ever to support access to health services and primary care.

HOW MANY PEOPLE NEED A FAMILY CARE PROVIDER?

In 2019, when planning for the region's Primary Care Network, the Ministry of Health identified that 8,861 people in Cariboo-Chilcotin did not have a family doctor or nurse practitioner. Since the switch to the Health Connect Registry, a provincial centralized waitlist for patients without a family care provider, it has been challenging to determine the exact number of unattached patients. As of April 2023, approximately 3,000 people in our region are registered as needing a family care provider. However, this number is likely an underestimate because many people have not yet registered with the Health Connect Registry.

The CSC encourages anyone without a family doctor or nurse practitioner to register with the Health Connect Registry. This centralized waitlist is the appropriate way to find a family care provider, and we kindly ask the public to refrain from calling clinics as they are currently overwhelmed with calls and have no availability for new patients. Despite providers not accepting new patients, the attachment list is actively connecting patients when space becomes available, or a new provider starts a practice.

The public can call HealthLinkBC at 8-1-1 or visit:

<https://www.healthlinkbc.ca/health-connect-registry/central-interior-rural> to register with the Health Connect Registry for a family doctor or nurse practitioner.

To appropriately plan and get funding for future medical services and providers, it's important to have an accurate number of how many people need a family care provider in the region.

For health care planning purposes, the Cariboo-Chilcotin region includes 100 Mile House, Williams Lake and several smaller communities reaching from 70 Mile House to Alexandria and encompassing communities to the East and West of Williams Lake, including 12 First Nations Communities.

HOW CAN I SEE PRIMARY CARE DOCTOR OR NURSE PRACTITIONER?

Virtual options for seeing a primary care doctor or nurse practitioner are still available. The CSC has developed a comic series to help patients understand the available services in the region in a simple, easy-to-read format on page 5-7 of this newsletter. In addition, pages 8-13 contain posters and brochures about available healthcare services for patients who do not have a family care provider.

Changes coming to primary care in the CIR...

Despite the challenges, CSC partners are exploring new service models and incentives to increase healthcare services in the region, and several of these are already underway. These new services aim to support team-based care, improve access to care for unattached patients, and make maternity services more accessible.

We are excited by the new service models being planned for the region, and believe they will positively impact the region's ability to recruit healthcare providers and patients' ability to access primary care. These new service models provide us with more options for recruitment, and allow us to redefine the way care is provided, improving access to care.

How to prepare for a good Zoom virtual health visit

- ✓ Test your camera, speakers, and microphone before a virtual health visit by joining this automated Zoom Meeting Test
- ✓ Find a private space with good internet connection
- ✓ Make sure the space has good lighting so your health care team can see your face
- ✓ Be prepared to answer a few questions and confirm your identity at the start of each visit
- ✓ Write down questions you want to ask your health care provider ahead of time
- ✓ Face the camera and speak clearly
- ✓ Have a back-up plan with your health care team (e.g. using phone call instead) in case there are technical problems

You can invite a family member or friend with you, when appropriate. Please introduce them at the start of the visit.

If someone is joining your visit in person and they are not in the camera view, please let your health care provider know.

If your virtual health visit does not meet your needs, you can stop it at any time and reschedule as a telephone or in-person appointment.
